

Corrigendum to

“New flood frequency estimates for the largest river in Norway based on the combination of short and long time series” published in Hydrol. Earth Syst. Sci., 24, 5595–5619, 2020

Kolbjørn Engeland¹, Anna Aano^{1,2}, Ida Steffensen³, Eivind Støren^{3,4}, and Øyvind Paasche^{4,5}

¹The Norwegian Water Resources and Energy Directorate, Oslo, Norway

²Department of Geosciences, University of Oslo, Oslo, Norway

³Department of Earth Science, University of Bergen, Bergen, Norway

⁴Bjerknes Centre for Climate Research, Bergen, Norway

⁵NORCE Climate, Bergen, Norway

Correspondence: Kolbjørn Engeland (koe@nve.no)

Published: 30 November 2020

The correct area of the entire Glomma catchment is 42 441 km², and the correct catchment area upstream of Elverum is 15 450 km². In the published paper it is written in both the Abstract and in Sect. 2.1 that the catchment area is 154 450 km².

This is a purely typographic error and did not influence any of the analyses and results presented in the paper.