Many thanks to the Editor for this assessment, and for your time working through the manuscript and reviews. The reviewers, in turn, have raised some curiosity in me and suggest several things that I had plans to follow up, along with other things that I had not thought of but certainly warrant additional study. Most of these potential research avenues are now pointed in the revised manuscript. There were no comments from the reviewers that I disagreed with. I have added discussion where appropriate and done my best to reorganize and clarify where requested, to address the reviewers' concerns. It was a privilege to receive two thorough and thoughtful reviews, and I believe that the revised manuscript reflects this valuable input.

The revised manuscript is attached, just text and tables at this moment. I am afraid that it grew in length to accommodate the reviewer requests, but I have retained the original focus and managed not to get drawn into any additional analyses or side trips. The revised figures will follow shortly.
