There have been 5 review comments already. The last review comment does the extra job of synthesizing the comments of the previous reviewers.

The authors should respond to each of the review comments separately - if questions or concerns are repeated by the reviewers you only need to respond once.

In any case there should be a rebuttal of the review comments, to allow the reviewers to respond as well - this is the HESS discussion process.

At the end of this discussion process, I will come back and summarize my recommendations to the authors, including the decision to publish, decline or accept with minor or major revisions.
