

Reply to review for Objective functions for information-theoretical monitoring network design: what is optimal? by Hossein Foroozand and Steven V. Weijs

The Authors replied to the comments convincingly and precisely. Every comment was taken into account and properly explained. The changes were made improved the paper.

The final comment is that probably the title of the paper deceives a little bit: "what is optimal" leads to think to something more complete on the problem while as authors stated in the abstract, "only exhaustive optimization will give the true optimum". However, I recommend the article for the publication.
